Global Cities at Work is about the people who always get taken for granted. The people who clean our offices, care for our elders and change the sheets on the bed. The book draws on testimony from more than 800 foreign-born workers employed in low-paid jobs in London during the first decade of the 21st century. We link London's new migrant division of labour to the twin processes of subcontracting and increased international migration. The book calls attention to the issue of working poverty and its impact on unemployment and community cohesion in London.
